

With the exception of retirement services, the financial services adoption in Mexico is similar by gender.

The critical gaps for the financial services adoption in the country depends more on the community size than in the gender.

